

NEW ATTACK IS LAUNCHED BY BRITISH

FRONT BETWEEN SCARPE RIVER AND LENS IS SCENE OF AN-OTHER TERRIFIC OF-FENSIVE.

FIERCE BATTLE RAGES

New German Divisions Have Been Brought Up to Defend Trench
Strongholds—Activity
Along French
Lines.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
British headquarters in France, via London, April 28.—Another attack was launched by the British early this morning at the front between the Scarpe river and Lens. On this ground some of the most desperate fighting has occurred since the British launched their offensive on the western front. The struggle now in progress is very bitter. The Germans, in anticipation of another British effort, have brought up reinforcements from their divisions, which have been identified by the British.

Face Trench Strongholds.
In today's drive, the British faced a well organized trench system protected by wire entanglements and held by strong forces. The artillery preparation had been in progress for several days, and much damage to the defense works, but the Germans remained many troublesome strong points between Roubaix and the Scarpe and Lens.

North of Gavrelle satisfactory progress was made as far as could be judged, and early in the day prisoners were brought back. South of this place, the British got on a trench between the British and a trench north of Lens.

It is reported that the British have occupied the town of Arleux and half of Oisy, but furious German counter-attacks have developed and the situation is one of surging changes.
The fiercest imaginable fighting is under way for the wood west of Roubaix.
The weather is favorable.

German Pressed.
London, April 28.—The Germans are now fighting for their lives against the irresistible pressure of the British.
The British have been successful in the capture of the British headquarters at the British headquarters today as quoted by Reuters correspondent at the British headquarters.

At the headquarters of the British, his disposition was somewhat nebulous, as must inevitably be the case in the early stages of such a fighting.
The British are progressing. By means of prisoners already taken, several German divisions have been identified.

French Activity.
Paris, April 28.—Heavy artillery fighting occurred last night between St. Quentin and the Oise, in the Champagne, the war office reports.
On the Verdun front, the French raided German trenches west of the Meuse and brought back prisoners from the sector of Hill 304.

Since April 10, the British have captured 476 cannon of all caliber, 412 machine guns and 119 trench mortars.
The number of prisoners has reached 20,780.

Along Scarpe River.
London, April 28.—The British have opened an attack along several miles of the front north of Scarpe river, according to an official announcement.
The British are making good progress in the face of opposition, the announcement adds.

SCARCITY OF SUPPLY SENDS PRICE HIGHER

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Chicago, April 28.—A world scarcity of supply as reflected by constantly increasing export bids are reported to be partly responsible for exciting advances during last week in the wheat market. Notwithstanding many violent setbacks meanwhile had been witnessed, quotations this morning showed the interval had advanced to about 13 1/2 to 14 1/2 to 15 1/2 to 16 1/2 to 17 1/2 to 18 1/2 to 19 1/2 to 20 1/2 to 21 1/2 to 22 1/2 to 23 1/2 to 24 1/2 to 25 1/2 to 26 1/2 to 27 1/2 to 28 1/2 to 29 1/2 to 30 1/2 to 31 1/2 to 32 ## The Greater Patriotism

Russia Throws Off the Yoke.
(By Paul Holmes.)

Chapter Four.
Outside the City Wall.

point. M. Rodzianko and myself searched well but we could find no others whom we could trust as we trust you, or who would carry out the work as we feel sure you can carry it out.

"B—but," Francois stammered, "what am I to do? How can I find Brusiloff? I know nothing of such things."

"That will be arranged in due time," replied the prince. "As I have said before, M. Rodzianko will be here directly and when he comes he will direct you about the details of your journey. You understand the plan, do you not?"

"I know only what was said at the meeting," L'Verne answered. "Then I will explain," said Usipoff. "What happened tonight was merely in the way of formalities. The decision for revolution was arrived at some time ago by a committee meeting in secret. But as you can see it would be useless to hope for the success of such a movement without the support of the army. The troops in and around Petrograd and Moscow will probably stand with us. From what information we have received from reliable sources we have been led to believe that such is the case."

"But what of the army of Brusiloff, on the western front? Brusiloff is the only real general that we have now, and his commands obedience from his soldiers. Without him we would be beaten at the very start of our revolt, for he could march down upon us or allow the Germans to pour in here and restore the situation."

"Can you see how matters are? Without positive assurance that General Brusiloff will recognize the power of the Russian republic we cannot go ahead. But on the other hand, if Brusiloff will promise to resist any force which Germany may attempt to send to the Czar's aid, or to defend Russia from a Teutonic attack which the Kaiser may launch at a favorable moment, then the success of our enterprise is already assured."

"And it is my part," L'Verne broke in, too early to be of service, "to Rodzianko asking his position in the matter. If he is loyal to the Czar he will most assuredly have a strong squad to attack me and inform the Czar of my plot about the plot and who is implicated, whereat some of you will perhaps make a journey to Siberia."

"Right and wrong said Usipoff, Brusiloff being as you will probably see a firing squad, although with a far less chance of success. If you accept this mission you must take those chances."

"I am not afraid," Francois laughed contemptuously. "It will not be the first time I have awaited my turn for a volley of German rifles."

At that moment the door opened and Michael Rodzianko, the most influential man in all Russia, stepped into the room.

"Does M. L'Verne accept our offer?" he asked when he had closed the door and taken a seat close to the two men. "He has not said yes or no as yet," answered Prince Usipoff, "but I entertain no doubts as to what his decision will be."

"Certainly I will go," Francois interrupted. "I had not been given the chance to answer the prince's proposal, or I would have said so long before. I will readily do anything I can to help along a great cause. If you have the message to General Brusiloff prepared I can start at once."

Rodzianko smiled, "but there is no need for such haste. I have the message ready, written and dated, and signed with identification papers which you may need. You will travel as a member of the French consulate here on your way to Riga, and you can make most of the journey by train. Probably there will arise occasions when you will have to travel on foot to avoid search, of course, but you can best decide these things yourself."

"The main thing is to place before General Brusiloff the letter which I will give you, and not to let anyone else see it. I need not say that in a position should find yourself in a position where you can either destroy it or see it fall into the hands of those who are true to the Czar you must choose the former course every time. The loss of the letter and the necessary delay which that would entail would not be as dangerous to us as that the knowledge contained in it should come to the Czar. You can see what a responsibility we are placing in you."

"Just it is not disclosed," said L'Verne with a dry laugh. "I thought it was," Rodzianko murmured. "We would never have allowed it to be subjected to you. How soon will you be ready to start?"

"Within an hour if necessary," the young soldier replied. "Good!" exclaimed the president of the bureau. "But there is no need of a midnight departure. Go home and get a good rest. Then procure clothes which will fit the part you are to play, and report to me at noon. I will give you the papers and others things which you will need."

"Getting out of the city will be the hardest part of all," broke in Usipoff. "You cannot leave in the way of the train, for people departing in this manner are required to have passports and must be thoroughly searched. You must go on foot, and you must go with the guards' knowledge. But if you safely pass this first barrier you will have left the worst behind you. Once without the city, you can easily board some west-bound train."

"Then," said L'Verne, "if that is all I believe I will try and get a good sleep before tomorrow noon. I will call here, M. Rodzianko, for the things you will have ready for me. After that I will act entirely upon my own initiative. If I fail to reach Brusiloff it will be no one's fault but my own. As soon as I have succeeded I will inform the people of the fact."

"And that message will be the keynote of the revolution," said the prince. "An hour after we have received it the fighting will be begun. And now, if we receive the key word from you, M. L'Verne, we can do nothing. And now, if we will return to the palace with me everything will be done which is possible to facilitate our journey."

The two arose and silently took their leave of Michael Rodzianko, who still sat in his chair gazing intently into the fireplace in front of him, where the flames leaped and crackled among the embers.

Francois had been surprised but not without over the turn of events. He was accepting a by no means minor part in the great movement which was to shake Russia to its foundations, and he welcomed the chance to show his patriotism to the allied cause. For by helping Russia from the separate peace which was impending he knew that he was doing far greater good to France than he could possibly do in any other way.

So he went back with Prince Usipoff and slept easily for the rest of the night. He was under no strain at all, as in perfect condition for the great task before him. For it was truly a great one to seek out General Brusiloff "somewhere in Russia" and deliver him a paper which no other eyes had seen. It would mean eluding the censors and the Russian home guards everywhere along the road. Such would be practically impossible for a man relying on his knowledge of the lay of the land and the speech of the people—but for a foreigner, who had lived in the land scarce three months—who knew nothing of the great Russian city which surrounded the city of Petrograd!

Francois awoke, refreshed and eager for action, at about 10 o'clock the morning. He was provided with such suit as is usually worn by a French consul, and ready for whatever might come he presented himself precisely at noon before the door of Rodzianko's residence, brought him a package and told him that the Duma's leader wished him goodspeed, but that an audience with him was practically impossible at the time.

L'Verne understood that from then on he was working alone and had nothing to fall back on but his own resources. He took the package meekly and went back to the street.

What step should he take next? He was puzzled and perplexed, and the more he thought about the matter the more he realized the awful responsibility which rested upon his shoulders. If he succeeded in his mission Czarism could fall in Russia. The absolute for four hundred years, would give way to the freedom of a new democracy. The millions who had been suppressed in a servile condition by generations of selfish monarchs would at last have a chance equal with the lower caste of more advanced nations. On the other hand, if he failed in the task which lay before him there was for him disgrace and death, for Russia the continuation of absolutism and subjection, for Germany an excellent chance to declare war upon the Allies, and for the world the deadly menace of the growing power of black magic, whose leader like Napoleon longed for a world-wide empire, and in the perusal of which aim all moral law would be swept aside by the unholy ambition of the Hohenzollerns.

At nightfall Francois stood by the great wall of Petrograd. The papers to Brusiloff were concealed in his boots. He started out upon his journey, and, come what might, there was no turning back now.

If with pleasure you are viewing any work a man is doing.
If you like him or you love him, tell him now;
Don't withhold your approbation till the person makes oration.
As he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow,
For no matter how you shout it, he won't really care about it;
He knows how many tears drop you have shed;
If you think some praise is due him, now's the time to slip it to him.
For he cannot read the tombstone when's he's dead.

More than fame and more than money is the comment kind and sunny.
And the hearty, warm approval of a friend.
For it gives to life a savor, and it makes you stronger, braver.
And it gives you heart and spirit to the end.
If he earns your praise—bestow it; if you like him—let him know it.
Let the words of true encouragement be said;
Do not wait till life is over and he's underneath the clover.
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

—J. A. Berg.

The sentiment contained in this little poem has been the topic of song and story for many generations, yet it is not worn out and it is in the discussion, some mind is inspired to think and some heart responds in kindly impulses the discussion will not be in vain.

The cemetery which shelters the bodies of our departed loved ones is always a sacred spot, and memories come back to us most vividly as we linger by the little mound which marks the last resting place. The love and care bestowed through life often extends out beyond the boundaries of time across devotion, faithful of the fact that no response can come back because the life is not there and the shrine contains only the shell which is returning to dust.

The sentiment, known as grave yard sentiment, is sacred, but not always wholesome. When it becomes an obsession so absorbing that it occupies the mind to the exclusion of everything else and this sometimes happens, then we cease to be normal and become morbid and then life is next to unendurable to ourselves and our friends about us.

There is only one sensible way to perpetuate a memory and that is to pick up the broken threads which death has severed and go on with the work. This is the way that influence lives on. It is the great link in the chain of immortality which holds the here and now to the life unseen.

As I write there comes to me the memory of a mother whose grave I have not seen for more than half a century. The picture of her gentle face, the gladness of her smile, and the cadence of her quiet voice through weary months of suffering are indelibly stamped on my mind, and my heart still responds to her sacred influence.

So these lives live on, as the good Lord intended they should, and while we do not always appreciate it, many of us are indebted to the good that is in us to the generations long since expired. The man who boasts of his morality and scoffs at sacred things, is usually indebted to the influence of the old home and the father and mother who rest in forgotten graves in some little country cemetery.

The thought which Mr. Berg had in mind when he wrote the little poem was a helpful thought. He believed that the time to help our friends and neighbors was while they are with us. That the time to scatter roses was when the pathway was steep and rugged, and the time to speak a word of good cheer and encouragement was when the battle was on and weary feet were struggling for a foot hold. A mighty good thought and a principle worthy of emulation.

Here is a little poem from the pen of Sam Warner Foss which was published in the Gazette some time ago. But it is so full of helpful suggestions that it is worth reproducing. The title of it is

"The House by the Side of the Road"

"Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by—
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish, and so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorners' seat,
Or hurl the cynics ban?
Let me live in a house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man."

"There are hermit souls that live withdrawn
In the place of their self-content;
There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart,
In a flawless firmament;
There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths
Where highways never ran;
But let me live by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man."

"I know there are brook-gladdened meadows ahead,
And mountains of wearisome delight;
And the road passes thru the long afternoon,
And stretches away to the night.
But still I rejoice when the travelers rejoice,
And weep with the strangers that roam,
Nor live in my house by the side of the road."

Like a man who dwells alone."

"I see from my house by the side of the road,
By the side of the highway of life,
The men who press with the ardor of hope,
The men who are faint with the strife.
But I turn not away from their smiles or their tears,
Both parts of an infinite plan;
Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man."

"Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by;
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish, and so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorners' seat,
Or hurl the cynics ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man."

Rev. Pierson of the Baptist Church used this poem in an address at Odd Fellows hall last Thursday night and Rev. Lewis of the Methodist Church referred to it in a sermon not long ago, and told him it came to be written.

The author, Mr. Foss, was a lecturer as well as a writer. He said that on a hike through England several years ago, climbing a hill one hot afternoon in August, dusty and weary, he noticed a little path running down through the woods, and on a tree a placard bore the invitation, "Turn in and rest."

He turned aside and followed the path through the shady woods and presently came to a bubbling spring under the wide spreading branches of a great oak. At the roots of the tree was a rustic bench and on the bench a basket of fruit and an old fashioned gourd, while a placard on the tree said "Help yourself and rest."

Mr. Foss said, "I sat down on the bench drank the cool refreshing water from the gourd, ate some of the delicious fruit, and then the query came to my mind, who is responsible for these kindly deeds. The little path wound on down through the woods and I followed it and soon came to a little thatched cottage where an old man and old woman greeted me and invited me in."

I accepted the invitation and said, "Are you the guilty parties who have afforded me so much pleasure? They confessed that they had lived a long and happy life together in the little cottage, said that they were very old and their work was done, and it occurred to them that some weary traveler might notice the sign at the road side and turn aside to rest, so they had provided the bench at the spring and the gourd and the basket of fruit to cheer some tired pilgrim."

"I said good bye with a song in my heart. Can you wonder that I was inspired to write about it? These are the kindly deeds which add to the joy of living and made life worth while. There is a wonderful difference between the gospel of love and the gospel of hate. The world today is in the vortex of both and the whirlpool has at last involved our own fair land, but we enter this unwholy war with naught but pity for the nations so long involved."

Our only motive is to aid in abolishing oppression and tyranny from the face of the earth. The most philanthropic work in which the nation ever engaged, it is easy to serve our friends and loved ones and express our love through sacrifice when necessary, but more difficult to serve humanity.

The service demanded today is so broad that we do not comprehend it, yet so important that it must not be neglected. There is work for all of us and it calls for most loyal service. There has been added to the horrors of war the horrors of famine and many desolated countries are turning to us for their food supply. The feeding of Belgium is but a drop in the bucket. We can not turn a deaf ear and we must work as never before to relieve wide spread want and destitution.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

—ROY K. MOULTON—

The Brighter Side.
Of course, there's no denying
A rain of shot and shell
Would be a little trying
And bothersome, as well,
And if the foe should serve us
With bombs that loudly burst,
'Twill make us rather nervous,
At any rate, at first!
But when we leave our labors
To heed the country's call,
Before we flourish sabres
And bayonets and all,
Before we are attacking
Our places in the ranks
We'll have a year of training—
For which, our fervent thanks!

'Twill put us in the fettle
And marching to the wars,
We'll show the proper mettle
Amid the battle's roar;
However cruel and deadly
It won't seem half so bad!

The Question Mark
The Question Mark—and is it not
A little bit absurd?
For though it asks an awful lot,
It never says a word.

Summer boarders are people who spend several weeks in the country each summer longing for the crisp home service they are usually very well behaved and make comical remarks to the farmer. Aside from the board they pay him the farmer cleans up a tidy sum each summer by sending the things his boarders say to the comic weeklies. A summer boarder can merely look at a cow and quack as a wink he will say something funny. The farmer puts this down in a book he always carries around with him. In the course of a couple of weeks he has several pages of good jokes to sell at his own rates. If you board with a farmer this summer say some funny things to him about the cows or the pigs. If he keeps a horse always poke fun at his horse. He will laugh at the funny things you say. Then he will go down and open up a can of fresh country peas out of his own cellar so that when you go back to the city you will miss the country vegetables. When you leave be sure and tell him how you enjoyed the country eating so that he can laugh some more.

Last Week's Question and the Answer

Last week's query: "What wood is first mentioned in the Bible?" was illustrated by a picture of Noah's Ark. The answer is found in Genesis, Chapter VI, Verse 14, in the Lord's command to Noah.

"Make thee an ark of gopherwood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch."

And not a bit of hair;
A little toad, full well he knows,
Should never hope for these.
Yet often to his mate he goes,
To tease and tease and tease.
What folly in a toad, you cry,
And what a thing to do!
But children, often you and I
Are quite as stupid, too!

Thoughts About Things
One reason why father may give daughter's callers a stern rebuke is because he was young once himself. People who are up-to-date these days are at least a year behind it. Or rather, they are a year ahead of the son of the man who tried to go over Niagara in a barrel recently. His father one better. He got married on a bet.

There may be people who never complain, but you can't make a janitor believe it.

How True!
Some find the world a place of woe.
A place of wail and rue.
Yet others like it here below.
Oh, quite a number do!

Some like their pleasant lives of ease,
Their world is bright and gay,
While some seem rather hard to please,
And grumble all the day.

In viewing life as on we trot
This much we find is true,
Who have it hard and cry it not,
Who have it easy do!

BELOIT WOMAN DIES FROM GUNSHOT WOUND

Husband Shoots Wife and Then Himself—She Had Successfully Experienced Four Caesarian Operations.

Mrs. Julius Newman, wife of the drink-crazed Beloit man who shot her at their home in the south end of the city Thursday night, and then sent a bullet crashing into his own breast with fatal results, died in the Beloit hospital last night. The act, in momentary anger, was more fatal to the wife than four Caesarian section operations she had undergone. Three of her four children still live, all healthy; Clarence, a sturdy youth of 7, who stood in the doorway and saw it all; Elsie, aged 3, in the home ill with measles; and Evelyn, a little two year old tot who could not understand why strange women should weep and sob over her as they cared for her Thursday night.

Mrs. Newman was hit in the side by the bullet. Yesterday morning the doctors were confident and issued the statement that she would recover. Her condition took an alarming and unexpected change for the worse yesterday afternoon and last night she followed her husband in death.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC

While the following letter copy was addressed to a private individual, it is self-explanatory:

FARMERS CO-OPERATIVE PACKING CO.

Vern M. Carr, Esq., Beloit, Wis., Apr. 24, 1917.

Dear Sir and Member:—
Replying to your esteemed favor of recent date, beg to say that I will endeavor in narrative form to answer all of the questions which you and many others have recently asked regarding the Farmers Co-Operative Packing Co. and thereby give the desired information in full so that all may acquire it without the necessity of asking individual questions. I will also try to answer all of the questions without repeating the questions themselves:

This plant, known as the Schmauss Packing Plant, was built eight years ago at a cost of about $315,000, and, according to the best information we are able to obtain, could not be duplicated at the present time under $600,000. The plant was purchased by the Farmers Co-Operative Packing Co. complete with 23 acres of ground, switch tracks, etc., at $160,000.

The Schmauss people were never able to run the plant because of the death of one of the brothers before the plant was completed, making it impossible for the remaining brother, Mr. Leonard H. Schmauss, to care for the packing plant together with the extensive interests which he had in the great retail markets of Rockford.

The Oake Packing Company then ran the plant for approximately 18 months, and as we are informed from the best of authority, were very successful in the packing business, but owing to outside interests which were not profitable were compelled to give up the packing business.

This Company was organized with $400,000 capital, or 4000 shares all told, one-half of which, or a little more, have been sold up to the present time; in the neighborhood of 60 to 75 shares have been sold at or near Beloit, and quite a large number at Janesville and other adjoining towns.

The Company is organized under the co-operative law wherein no single person can obtain more than five shares of stock, and each member has one vote regardless of the number of shares he may hold. The shares are transferred the same as in any corporation and may be transferred to anyone who has not already five shares in the company. The shares are fully paid and non-assessable; the first $100,000 were sold at par, the next $100,000 at $1.05 per share, and after May 1st, 1917, the price per share will be $1.10 for a short time, after which they will be sold at a higher price.

Shipping stations with regular days for shipment will be established just as soon as shares enough are sold so that we have sufficient working capital with which to pay spot cash for the livestock offered by our members; how quick that will be depends upon how fast we are able to sell the shares and how much each of our members assist us in this matter.

Permanent directors will be elected just as soon as the greater part of all the shares are sold. The directors will be chosen by calling a meeting of all of the stockholders by giving them ten days' notice by mail.

The plan of purchasing livestock is to pay each member just what his livestock would bring him at the packing plant in Chicago. Members are not required to sell all of their livestock to the Company unless they so wish, and they will not be expected to do so if they can get more money elsewhere, but we are satisfied that they cannot get as much at any other place.

We believe, and have often heard it stated from experienced people, that we have the best equipped packing plant in the State of Illinois.

The business is conducted for no special interests, but for the benefit of every member upon exactly the same basis; the books of the Company are open at all times for inspection by any member or members, and all business is so conducted that we shall be pleased at any time to have our members come in and make a thorough investigation.

Co-operation is the coming mode of doing business everywhere, and no farmer should lose any time in securing an interest in this Company. With kindest regards, we beg to remain

Very truly yours,

Farmers Co-Operative Pkg. Co.,

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

A wave of gossip about the movie stars has hit the country and is spreading daily. In a thousand restaurants thousands of diners fuss and fume in vain for service while the blonde waitresses tell their handsome chief the latest tidbit about this star or that. The "dimpled dear" you take to the "Follies" breaks into the choicest of Bert Williams' toasts while the blonde waitresses tell their handsome chief the latest tidbit about this star or that. The "dimpled dear" you take to the "Follies" breaks into the choicest of Bert Williams' toasts while the blonde waitresses tell their handsome chief the latest tidbit about this star or that.

The chauffeur, the street car conductor, the barber, the postman, the man, the world's wise debater, and the innocent chaperon have tidbits to lose whenever occasion offers. Even grandma, over her tea and cigarette, winks and says and who knows but she may be exactly how many women Charlie Chaplin has to hit in the face with custard pies to earn his $670,000 a year.

It has become so epidemic that nothing is more important to a girl in the social or intellectual swim than to be able to discourse intelligently about the stars. Mark you, intelligently and not only intelligently but intimately and in a her of authority, a knowing atmosphere.

It is therefore with the soul-soothing knowledge that we are doing a world service to those of conversational persuasion that we submit the following intimacies for dinner table small talk:

First, Gail Kane, shapely beauty, has ordered the suits of different colors and designs. This is important, for Miss Kane is notorious as a style-setter at the beaches.

Marjorie Rameau has just published some verses which she stands for herself. This is her first offense. Billie Rhodes issues the startling news that she will never marry any man who wears a wrist watch.

Crane Wilbur desires to have it noted abroad that he is tired of being asked if he wears corsets. "I don't," says the indignant Mr. Wilbur.

William Russell says that any man who smokes monogrammed cigars will carry a powder puff. Many Miles has been presented with a bowl of nine gold fish and she has named each one after some member of her company. George Fishers is dead already. Jackie Saunders, the lady of the "sunkist" hair, longs, she avows to be a deadly brunette.

Ann Murdock, no matter how busy she is, goes for a long swim every day. Flora Finch, leading lady for the late John Bunny, has just made a burlesque of "War Brides." It is called "War Prides."

They are measuring Sessue Hayakawa for a complete suit of furs, but don't bother to take Carmen Phillips out over her in a motor boat and artistically drown her. It is said Mr. Hayakawa is performing this incident with considerable lack of enthusiasm.

"The war will bring a boom to motion picture theatres," declares Fredrick John Freuler of Mutual. He further says that anything which shocks people out of routine tends to help the motion picture theatres.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins
and Later Treasurer of Adam Farrpugh Circuses.

On Tuesday last, accompanied by a friend, I went to Chicago to take a look at the great Ringling Show which is located in the new building on Wabash Avenue and 15th street, and this is the 21th year that the Ringlings have opened their great show every spring in the city.

This was the first year that the Ringling's had opened with a matinee performance in the afternoon. Heretofore they had always opened their show with an evening performance and the vast crowds that gathered round the Coliseum for the opening matinee, was evidence enough that the matinee performance was a success as it took many special police to handle the great crowds and keep them in line until the box office opened.

This was evidence enough that the popularity of the great Ringling Show was to be the one big thing for more than three weeks to come.

On our arrival on Tuesday evening we were given a warm welcome and the best seats in the house, and it is any wonder that the Ringling's have made success that they have in the business, for they are the kind that never forget and it is always a pleasure to them to look after old friends in the business that they made more than 30 years ago.

We had just seated when John Agee, the director came to our box and shook hands but had time to visit a minute, for it was already time for him to announce the opening of the show, and right then I want to say that John Agee is one of the most tireless workers with the Great Show and yet he knows every movement of the show so thoroughly that it would seem to an outsider that it all came easy to him.

While there are a few new faces around the front of the show, there are still many others that have been there all the way from 15 to 25 years, including Lou Graham the announcer, whose voice can be heard to the farthest corner of the building.

At the moment let us turn to the band master, and the man who has composed much of the music for the beautiful Cinderella, and for the first creature played "America" while the vast audience all stood and cheered the great band to the echo.

Then the great curtains rolled back and the beautiful Cinderella, marched in and her dance was on. The wardrobe this year is all new, and that with the catchy music made a spectacle worth going miles to see. While many of the old acts were retained, there are still many new ones that the public has never seen before, among these being May Worth, the world's greatest barback rider, who turns forward and back summer-back as much ease on the bare-back of a horse, as the average person would walking on the street.

I have seen all the famous barback riders for the last thirty-eight years, but they have all got to hand it to May Worth. The vast audience seemed to almost go mad over her performance which made a feature of throwing calcium lights into the ring all during her performance.

I heard many spectators say that her act alone was worth the price of admission. Another great feature with the show, entirely new to the public, is Hillary Long, known as the "upside down man" who after doing the most wonderful act I have ever seen, finished by sliding down a wire from the top of the tent balancing on his head. The grandchildren of Hillary, who put on the first circus in South Africa, did a great act, the McPhersons, a troupe of Highlanders, and "Mammy" the Black Road, a tiny negro doing an acrobatic stunt, and the woodchoppers, all of which were high class features in their work, and I must not forget the clowns for what a circus be without clowns.

At the first introduction they all came out together and I never saw so many clowns in the ring at one time before, and a lady sitting near us was heard to say, "Why I believe there is a hundred of them." Possibly the only man that knows just how many there were, is the man in the ticket wagon who pays them off. But they were all high class in their business, all their stunts being new and the kind that would make you laugh and forget your cares.

After the close of the show an old friend came up and shook hands with me, whom I had not seen since the close of the Farrpugh show in 1880. He was heard to say, "I could not place him until he gave me his name, which is Lew Morris. He was connected with a side show for four or five years during my time there. He was a young man of 21 or 22 years old, and in the change the years had brought I could see but little of Lew Morris as he was in the eighth row of the European war that Charlie returned to this country after touring every civilized country in Europe.

In the last few years I have known several men who have been given positions with the Barnum and the Ringling Show, not that they were absolutely needed at the time, but because they were good men, for they were the kind that were good listeners and did but little talking but knew all the time everything that was going on and at least four or five of this kind that I might mention, have grown into the business to be valuable men and today are "retiring salaries far more than many bank presidents through the country.

If there is anything that will make a man feel younger, it is to be handed the "dope" that was given to me on Tuesday and Wednesday last by old friends and new ones with the Ringling Show and in the Showmen's League headquarters on Dearborn street.

The Ringling Show closed their engagement in Chicago on Sunday evening and shipped direct to St. Louis, where they opened with a matinee on Tuesday afternoon for five days. Their Sunday run will be to Muncie, Indiana, which will be their first show under canvas. The show goes directly east and in about two weeks will show Baltimore and Washington, D. C., taking in all the larger cities of the east.

The Barnum show closes their engagement Saturday evening of this week, and next Monday open in Philadelphia for one week, after which they will start west taking in all the larger cities and showing Cincinnati for three days, when they will come on west. As to whether the Barnum show will exhibit in Janesville this season, is not yet definitely settled.

Fredrick Horch of Elkhorch, visited the latter part of the week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Horch. A large number attended the M. E. Aid society Thursday afternoon and $140 was added to the treasury.

The local speaking contest will be held in the auditorium of the high school Friday evening. Those speaking are Margaret Klein, Ruth Perkins, Amy Borsall and Donald Dewire.

Word was received here Friday morning from Harvard that Lester Bush had passed away at the home of his sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Fay Hoard were Janesville visitors Wednesday.

NEBRASKA CONCENTRATING ON CORN AND BARLEY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Lincoln, Neb., April 28.—Under the direction of the University of Nebraska agricultural experiment station, Nebraska today is fighting for greater corn and barley crops ever grown in the state. Baked in their efforts for bumper wheat crops and cause winter wheat to be killed and plowed up, the state is planning to do its share of the national food mobilization campaign through new plantings and increase of acreage. Baby will be practically a new problem for most Nebraska farmers, as it has been grown but little in the past, though the climate is admirably suited for it.

MYERS THEATRE.

At the Myers theatre Thursday, May 10, William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present George V. Hobart's modern morality drama, "Experience." The engagement will be for one night only.

The play comes to this after runs of nine months in New York, five months in Boston and seven months in Chicago. The famous New York-Hobart "Experience" organization will be seen here.

The play tells of Youth's journey into the world to make a name for himself. He leaves home with Ambition but reaching the great city he is so captivated by a fascinating lady called Pleasure that Youth leaves Ambition for the gay life of the Primrose Path, and wanders down its byways with Frivolity, Excitement, Song and Passion and other alluring ladies, until he reaches the deep and dark subways of life. One of the spectacular scenes shows a modern gambling house with every gaming device in full operation, including a roulette wheel. This scene is called the Corridor of Chance. In the House of Lost Souls one sees the terrible effect of drugs on human beings. But in the play there is a beautiful scene called the Street of Forgotten Days, and in this act Youth is saved from Crime by the never failing miracle of a mother's love.

In the Golden Cabaret scene the latest songs are sung and the very newest dances given. There is also a swagger fashion show given on the Primrose Path in which the very latest positions of the modern art are shown. The young ladies of the company were especially selected for their exquisite feminine charms, each girl representing a distinct type of beauty. In the cast will be Conrad Nagel, Louise Gerard, Maud Furness, Edwin Blinn, Edna Penton, Peggy Ford, Duncan Penwarden, Lillie Leslie, Adele Durand, Edith, Harriet Gustin, Guy Collins, Lillian, Armstrong, Dan Van Clee, Chiltonham Faulkner, William Bemus, Irene Palmer, Edward Von Vechten, Joseph W. Weber, Peggy O'Keefe, Louise Everett, Betty Blanche, Margaret Browning, Harold Burnett, Albert Gran, Max Duddick, Alice Palmer, John Harrington, George Berry, Lawrence Flynn, Edwin Gilton and Andrew Robbins.

The play is given in ten vivid contrasting and spectacular scenes.

A ROMANCE OF
THE LEWIS AND CLARK
EXPEDITION

By Emerson Hough,
Author of "The Mississippi
Bubble," "Fifty-four
Forty or Fifty,"
Etc.

Copyright, 1916, by Emerson
Hough.

In the white misty clouds, utter now and then, he could see naked forms swaying, bending forward, plying their weapons. Somewhere in the midst of it, out in the back of head and horn, his friend was riding, forgetting all else but the excitement of the chase. What if accident had befallen either of them? Lewis could not avoid asking himself that question.

Now the riders edged through the herd, outward, around its flank—turned it, were crowding it back, milling and confused. Out of the dust emerged two figures, naked, leaning forward to the leaping of their horses. One was an Indian, his black locks flowing, his eyes gleaming, his hand flogging his horse as he rode. The other was a white man, his tall white body splashed with blood, his long red hair, broken from his cue, on his shoulders.

The two were pursuing the same animal, a young bull which thus far had kept his distance some fifty yards or so ahead. But as Lewis looked both riders urged their horses to yet more speed. The plumed of William Clark, well ridden, sprang away in advance and hit him alongside of the quarry. Lewis himself saw the poised spear, saw it plunge, saw the buffalo stumble in its stride and saw his companion pounce on, whooping in exultation at Weucha, who came up an instant later, defeated, but grinning and offering his hand.

Weucha, who came up to Lewis after automatically shaking the hand of William Clark, peered with curiosity into Lewis' almost empty quiver. It smiled again, for that the white man had hidden well was obvious enough.

He called a young man to him, showed him the arrow mark and sent him back to see how many of the dead buffalo showed arrows with similar marks.

In time the messenger came back carrying a sort of arrows, obtaining, he held up the fingers of two hands. "Tell him that is nothing, Dorian," said Lewis. "We could have killed many more if we had wished. We see that the Sioux can ride. Now let us see if they can talk at the council fire."

The two leaders listened to their own encouragement to remove all traces of the hunt. An hour later they emerged from their tents and as officers of the army, in cocked hat and full uniform, with sword at side.

With the fall of the sun the drums sounded in the Indian village. The orders passed along the street summoning the people to the feast, summoning also the chiefs to the council lodge. Here the headmen of the village gathered, sitting about the little fire, the peace pipe resting on a forked stick before them, waiting for the arrival of the white chiefs, who could make the thunder come and who, moreover, could lead stripped and strike the buffalo even as the Sioux.

The white leaders were in no haste to show themselves. They demanded the full dignity of their station, but they came at last, their own drum beating as they marched at the head of their men, all of whom were in uniform.

Meriwether Lewis took the dag from the standard bearer as they reached the door of the council lodge and thrust the staff into the soil, so that it stood erect beside the lance and shield of Weucha, chief of the Yanktonais. Then, leaving their own men on guard without, the two white chiefs stepped into the lodge and, with not too much attention to the chiefs sitting and waiting for them, took their own places in the seat of honor. They removed their hats, shook free their hair, which had been loosened from the cues. And so, in dignified silence, not looking about them, they sat, their long legs spread out on their shoulders.

Exclamations of excitement broke even from the dignified Sioux chiefs. Clearly the appearance and the conduct of the two officers had made a good impression. The circle eyed them with respect.

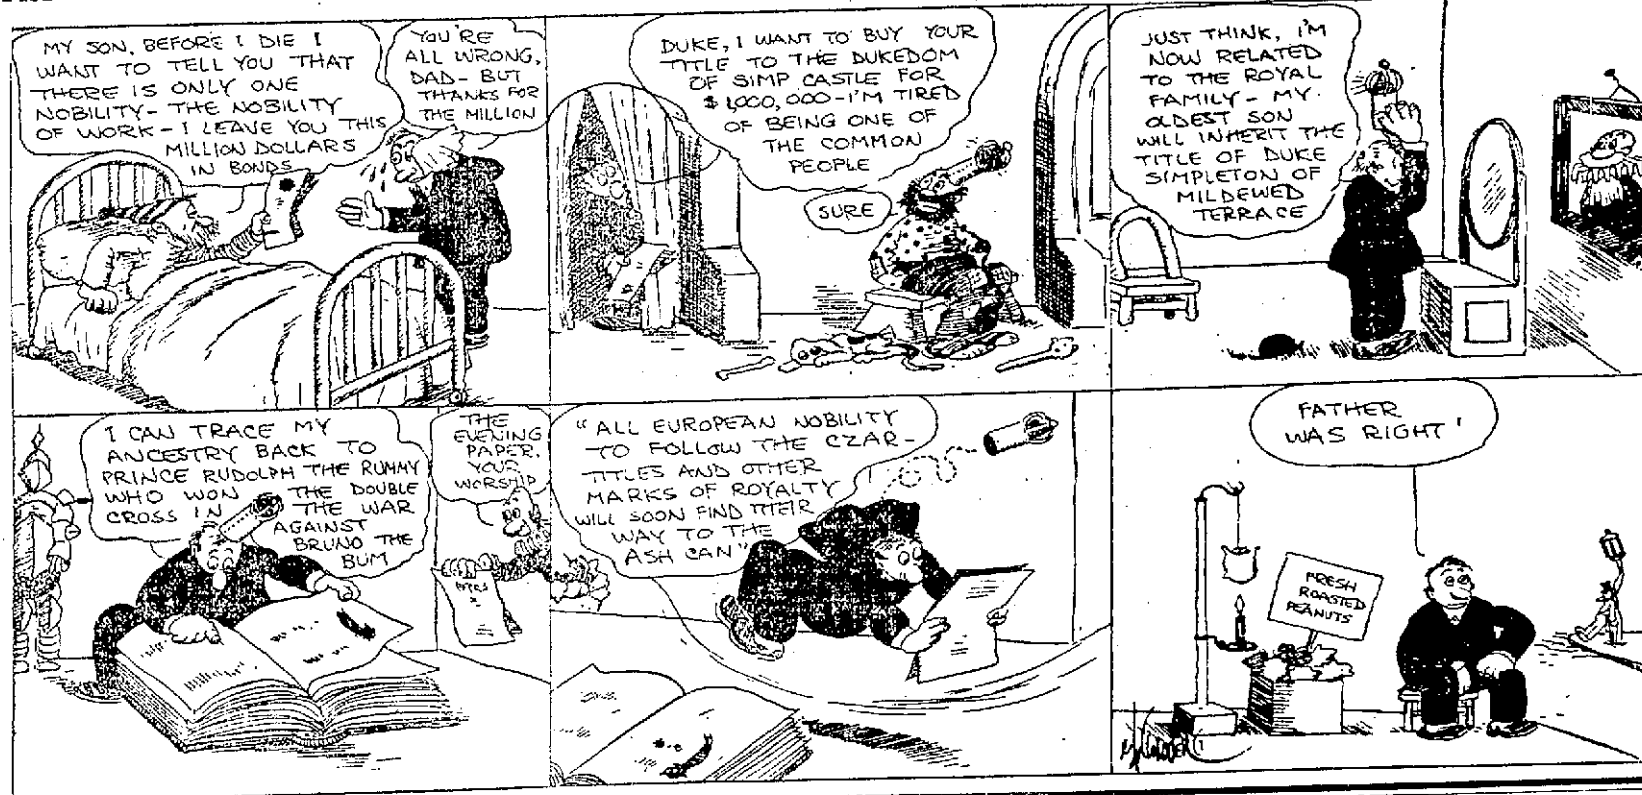

At length Meriwether Lewis, holding in his hand the great peace pipe that he had brought across.

"Weucha," said he, Dorian interpreting for him, "you are headman of the Yanktonais. I offer you this pipe. Let us smoke. We are at peace. We are children of the Great Father, and I do not bring war. I have put a flag outside the lodge. It is your flag. You must keep it. Each night you must take it down, roll it up and put it in a parchment, so that it will not be torn or soiled. Whenever you have a great feast or meet other peoples let it fly at your door. It is because you are a chief that I give you this flag. I gave one to the Omaha, another to the Ojibwa. Let there be no more war between you. You are under one flag now."

"I give you this medal, Weucha, this picture on white metal. See! It has the picture of the Great Father himself, my chief, who lives where the sun rises. I also give you this writing, where I have made my sign and where the red headed chief, my brother, has made his sign. Keep these things, so that any one who comes here may know that you are our friends, that you are the children of the Great Father."

"Weucha, they told us that the Sioux were bad in heart, that you would say we could not go up the river. Our Great Father has sent us up the river, and we must go. Tomorrow our boats must go on their course. If the Great Father has such medicine as this I give you go you think we could go back to him and say the Sioux would not let us pass? You have seen that we are not afraid, that we are chiefs—we can do what you can do. Can you do what we can? Can you make the thunder come? Are any of your men able to strike the eye of a deer, the head of a grouse, at fifty paces with the rifle? All of my men can do that.

"I give you these presents—these lace coats for your great men, these hats also, such as we wear, because you are our brothers and are chiefs. A little powder, a few balls. I give you, because we think you want them. I give you a little tobacco for your pipes. If my words sound good in your ears I will send a talking paper to the Great Father and tell him that you are his children."

Deep-throated exclamations of approval met this speech. Weucha took the pipe. He crossed himself, a tall and powerful man, splendidly clad in savage fashion, and spoke as the born leader that he also was. He pledged the loyalty of the Sioux and the freedom of the river.

"I give you the horse you rode this morning," said Weucha to Lewis, "the black runner. To you, red haired chief, I give the white and black horse that you rode. It is well that chiefs like you should have good horses."

"Tomorrow our people will go a little way with you up the river. We want you for our friends, for we know your medicine is strong. We know that when we show this flag to other tribes—to the Ojibwa, the Omahas, the Ojibwa—they will fall on the ground and knock their heads on the ground, as the black man did when the red headed chief raised it above him."

"The Great Father has sent us two chiefs who are young, but very wise. They can strike the buffalo. They can speak at the council. Weucha, the Yanktonais, says that they may go on. We know you will not lose the trail. We know that you will come back. You are chiefs!"

CHAPTER XVII.

Sacajawea, the Girl Guide. FROM the Sioux country the explorers, surmounting many difficulties, made their way to the country of the Mandans. Autumn was at hand. Soon it would be winter on the plains. It was more than five months since the party had left St. Louis. The Mandan village lay at a great wilderness crossroads, or, rather, at the apex of a triangle, beyond which none had gone.

Big White, chief of the Mandans, welcomed the party as friends, for he was quick to grasp the advantage the white men's goods gave his people over the neighboring tribes and also quick to understand the virtue of competition.

"Brothers," said he, "you have come for our beaver and our robes. As for us, we want powder and ball and more iron hatchets and knives. We have traded with the Assiniboines, who are foolish people, and have taken all their goods away from them. We have killed the beaver until we are tired of killing them. The Sioux will not trouble us if we have plenty of powder and ball. We know that you have come to trade with us. See, the snow is here. Light your lodge fires with the Mandans. Stay here until the grass comes once more."

And so the exploring expedition went into winter quarters, and a log fortress was built. Here they worked and made ready for pushing forward as soon as conditions would permit.

One cold winter morning while talking over their future plans Lewis remarked to Clark:

"We are at a blank wall here. We lack a guide now; that is sure. Two interpreters we have, who may or may not be of use, but no one knows our country. But now, you know our other new interpreter, the sullen chap, Charbonneau, that polygamist scamp with two or three Indian wives?"

"Yes, and a surly brute he is," replied Clark.

"Well, it seems that last summer Charbonneau married still another wife, a girl not over sixteen years of age. I should judge. He bought her. She was a slave, a captive brought down from somewhere up the river by a war party. She is a pleasant girl and always smiles. She seems friendly to us. See the moccasins she made for me but now. And I only had to knock her husband down once for beating her!"

"Lucky man!" grinned William Clark. "I have knocked him down half a dozen times, and she has made me no moccasins at all. But what then?"

"So far as I can learn, that Indian girl is the only human being here who has ever seen the Stony mountains

"Sacajawea she calls herself—the 'bird woman.'" [From Alice Cooper's statue of Sacajawea.]

The girl says that she was taken captive years ago somewhere near the summit of the Stony mountains. Above her a great river comes in, which they call the Yellow Rock river—the 'Rojane,' Jussamee calls it. Very well. Many days or weeks' journey toward the west this river comes again within a half day's march of the Missouri. That is near the summit of the mountains, and this girl's people live there.

"By heavens, Merne, you've a genius for getting over new country!"

"Wait. I find the child very bright—very clear of mind. And listen. Will the mind of a woman is better for small things than that of a man. They pick up trifles and hang on to them. I'd as soon trust that girl for a guide out yonder as any horse stealing warrior in a hurry to get out of it again. Raiding parties cling to the river courses, which they know, but she and her people must have been far to the west of any place these adventurers of the Minnetarees ever saw. Sacajawea she calls herself—the 'bird woman.' I swear I look upon that name itself as a good omen. She has come back like a dove to the ark, this bird woman. William Clark, we shall reach the sea."

The snows had come soft and deep, blown on the icy winds. The horses of the Mandans were housed in the lodges and lived on cottonwood instead of grass. When the vast herds of buffalo came down from the broken hills into the shelter of the fens the men returned frostbitten with their loads of meat. The sky was dark. The days were short.

To improve the morale of their men the leaders now planned certain festivities for them. On Christmas eve each man had his stocking well stuffed with such delicacies as the company stores afforded—pepper, salt, dried fruits long cherished in the commissary and such other knickknacks as might be spared.

On Christmas day Drouillard brought out a fiddle. A dance was ordered and went on all day long on the punchon floor of the main cabin. In moccasins and leggings, with hair long and tunic belted close to their lean waists, the white men danced to the tunes of their own land—the reels and hoedowns of old Virginia and Kentucky.

The sounds of revelry were heard by the Mandans, who came up to the gate. "White men make a medicine dance," they said, and knocked for entrance. Two women only were present, the wife of Jussamee, the squaw man, and Sacajawea, the girl wife of Charbonneau, the interpreter of the Mandans. These two had many presents.

The face of Sacajawea was wreathed in smiles. Always her eyes followed the tall form of Meriwether Lewis wherever he went. Her own husband was but her husband, and already she had elected Meriwether Lewis as her delfy. When her husband thrashed her, always he thrashed her husband.

In her simple child's soul she consecrated herself to the task which he had assigned her. Yes, when the grass came she would take these white men to her own people. If they wanted to see the salt waters far to the west—her people had heard of that—then they should go there also. The bird woman was very happy that Christmas day. The chief had thrashed Charbonneau and had given her wonderful presents.

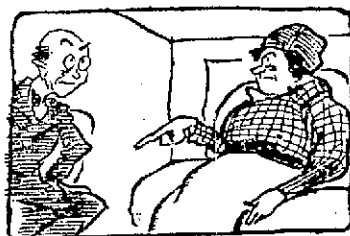

And so the winter passed, and the welcome spring opened the way for further progress.

Dinner Stories

The rector of a church in Maryland was in his study, hard at work on his sermon for the coming Sunday, when a visitor was announced. She was a big muscular woman, and when the minister had brought forward a chair she flopped into it and opened up bluntly, as follows: "You're Minister Jones, ain't you?"

"Maybe you'll remember marryin' a couple of strangers at your church a month ago."

"What were the names?" "William Perkins and Elizabeth Jones," said the woman, "and I am Elizabeth."

Are you, indeed? I thought I remembered your face when you came in, but— "Yes," continued the visitor, "I'm her, all right, and I thought as how I ought to drop in and let you know that William has escaped!"

The sympathetic visitor to the jail saw that one of the prisoners had a rat in his possession. "Ab, you have a rat, I see," he said blandly.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, April 28, 1877.—Now is the time that carpets come up, are taken out and struck at with a broom handle, and the new papers put under them.

It now comes to the knowledge of the public that Frank Davies who stole a horse at Milton two weeks ago, and was arrested and lodged in jail here, was passing through the country under a fictitious name, his real name being Frank H. Puncture. He was caught near Mukwanago and has been in the reform school at Waukesha in jail at Rockford, Ill., and twice in the state prison at Waupun. He was discharged last October.

The broad question is becoming an

"Yes, sir," said the prisoner. "I feeds him every day. I think more of that rat than any other living creature."

That reply pleased the visitor immensely. "In every man," he said, "there is something of the angel left if one can only find it. How came you to take such a fancy to the rat?"

"Cos he bit the jailer."

He was going to propose, but before doing so he wished to make sure she was a competent girl. So he asked her: "Can you wash dishes?" "Yes," she said sweetly. "Can you wipe them?"

He didn't propose. Many special bargains each day in the want columns. Read them.

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.)

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—What is the selective type transmission so widely used? Is it not the progressive and satisfactory type just as good? They were used on many cars.

The planetary type is still used, and some front end cars only two speeds forward and is apt to be noisy on low gear. The progressive type of sliding gear is quite a speed in meshing gears to pass through a speed not required. Thus to back out of a danger you would mesh second, first, and reverse gears. If the rear wheel were in line you might not be able to do it. With the selective type of sliding gear you go directly to the speed intended, and there is no danger of sliding past that speed.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—What is meant by a "stone-bruise"?

A stone-bruise in a shoe is due to a blow from a stone or other hard substance while running at high speed or at medium speed with the foot partially injured. The shoe is cracked between the sole and the rim and the fabric is broken. This makes a weak spot in the tread or sole and soon there is a blow-out. A stone-bruise in a shoe is as follows: Lay a piece of rubber on a hard surface, place the shoe on top. Strike a heavy blow with the edge of a hammer and the cloth will be broken where the blow hit, but the rubber will be unharmed.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Occasionally I hear a popping noise at my carburetor. Is it dangerous? Please give cause for question.

Popping back or back firing at carburetor is extremely dangerous. If the carburetor has been primed or there is much of fuel valve, or adjustment troubles at times in distributor, which cause an explosion in carburetor when fuel valve is open. Look over these parts carefully as occasionally a carburetor is not totally wrecked from just this cause.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—The tires on my car are called "quick-ditchable," but I find it takes half an hour of hard work to remove one. How can I make it easier to take them off? A. G.

The trouble is probably due to rust, as a quick ditchable usually comes off very quickly. After removing, clean off all rust carefully and polish the metal with graphite and shellac, or the special rim paint, which can be obtained at any supply store. Some use graphite and oil or graphite and grease, which is good where metal surfaces come together, but should not be applied where the shoe and tube can touch.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—At times my motor makes a slight knock, which seems to come from some part of the cylinder. Please tell me how to go to work to locate it.

Knowing in the motor may come from a variety of causes. It usually means a loose bearing, which must be located and replaced immediately, and then the motor may be due to carbon forming in the head of the engine, an overheat on time, or spark advanced too far. When you notice such a knock retard the spark and note if the noise stops. Then consider if the motor is overheat. If it stands at radiator or runs after switch is "off" it is overheat or is being fired by glowing carbon. Remove spark plug and see if it is highly carbonized. If it is, have carbon removed. If knocking still continues it may be piston slap, but usually in old engines. As piston comes to top on compression stroke it bounces on right side of cylinder. As it goes down power stroke it bounces on left side. If piston is badly worn it strikes a blow as it comes over, and remedy except re-bore the cylinder and use new pistons and rings. Sometimes it is caused by the valve tappets being out of adjustment, and out of adjustment and not the trouble.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—My four cylinder car, 1916 model, has been run about 4,000 miles and the engine over-heats immediately on hard use. The motor has not had the power it used to have, and paces up slowly. It is equipped with high compression and thermosiphon cooling system. The radiator is kept clean and refilled about every month. At present there is a very light deposit of carbon in the cylinder chamber. As it goes down the cylinder when the valves were ground. Am using a medium grade of oil and keep the oil well filled. The compression seems pretty good, but why should the engine overheat so much?

The trouble may be due to clogged cooling system. Merely draining the radiator is not sufficient to clean it. Provide two pounds of washing soda, a bucket and stick for stirring. Run engine long enough to heat up the water. Run some into the bucket, stirring to dissolve the soda. When the bucket is nearly full, pour solution into radiator, straining it carefully. If there is no strainer in radiator pour through a cloth.

HELPFUL HINTS.

A squeak is one of the most annoying and most elusive troubles to which a car is subject. Usually it is located in the springs, and so they must be oiled. Jack up the frame, taking the load off the springs. Pry the leaves apart and apply graphite grease by means of a brush. This will stop most of the squeaks coming at the tips of the springs. This treatment usually stops the noise.

A device on the market to spread the leaves saves the trouble of jacking up the wheels. Although it makes the process easier it acts on the screw and wedge principle, and separates the leaves as far as may be necessary.

Of course, the spring clips holding the ends of the leaves together must be removed. On some springs a piece of metal is folded round two leaves while it is red hot. This makes it difficult to put out between them.

A useful trick is to place the graphite grease in an oil can and set it over a hot flame. When melted the grease is squirted in between the leaves, especially the part close to the bolts that hold them to the axle. As squeaks frequently come from this part this is especially recommended. If pure graphite grease is used in places which it could not reach otherwise.

But squeaks do not always come from the springs. After spending enough time on them, you may find a squeak wherever two metal surfaces come together. Hood and radiator, or dash and floorboard, or trunk and floorboard, or wherever else. Squirt it in with plenty of force, and you will probably stop it.

With the British Armies in the Field, April 28.—Ask any Canadian about the Americans in the ranks and you will find that they are not only two names, Major Stewart and Captain Stanley Woods, both from the United States army, and both killed about the same time, but they are the same man.

Stanley Woods comes from a well known family in Kansas City, and on the staff of General Wood. His father fought for the north and his uncle for the south in the civil war. He resented the U. S. commission, against the urgent wishes of his family, and enlisted as a private. He was anxious to get to the front, and so he unhesitatingly tackled the minister of militia himself. He gave him the rough side of his tongue, and told him that he was worrying him more than half a dozen battalions. But I like you, he wound up, thought the world and saw it was a mistake. He was a champion baseball player. His spirit was inexhaustible, and the worse the time the merrier he was. He was a man who wanted to die happy. Send me something to drink," was a typical note to a chum, when he was out in the front lines.

He always said that if he had to be killed he wanted to die leading his men in a charge. He had his wish. When, in June, 1915, the Germans by a tremendous sudden attack succeeded in taking the line of Mount Sorrel, dominating the Ypres, his division was called upon to recover it. He commanded his company in the great charge and reached the last ridge. Then a shell caught him. He was a champion baseball player. His spirit was inexhaustible, and the worse the time the merrier he was. He was a man who wanted to die happy. STATE'S WAR RECORD

More Than One in Every Two Voters Went Out in '16—Can the Boys of 1917 Equal That Enthusiasm?

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, April 28.—There was an "an" in the Wisconsin state senate on Tuesday that should wake up the legislature the governor and the people of the state. In the discussion of the question to print 50,000 copies of President Wilson's war message for distribution in Wisconsin, Senator Raguse, Socialist of this city, is reported to have said:

"I am not going to create patriotism, but I will not do it. You cannot create patriotism in a country where 85 per cent of the people do not own land and have no stake in the country. I understand it, it is to do as was done when the Maine was blown up from the inside. You must either destroy property or you must live up to the inside, and property and lives both were destroyed, in order that 'Remember the Maine' could be heralded over the country and the people would be roused to patriotism."

Senators Bennett, Burke and others sharply called Raguse down and would deride his remarks. The matter went over until Thursday, when Raguse was expelled. No one else was expelled, but his remarks were the other two socialists. This prompt action by the senate should be impressive to the entire state. It is time to look Wisconsin as a part of the pro-German propaganda.

Any man who can stand up and repeat the Socialist national resolutions recently adopted at St. Louis and say that he endorses them, can be assured that he is not a patriot. He is a traitor, and he should be prosecuted for treason against the United States and undoubtedly will be.

Watch Socialist Measures.

It is well for members of the legislature to watch closely any and every Socialist bill before the legislature and be sure that it is not intended to give encouragement to obstruction or provoke chaos in the national government. This is the sort of thing that in the early days of the civil war was called "the fire in the rear."

Had to stop then and it must stop now. A bill before the legislature is unwise and I think both unnecessary and mischievous. That is the bill introduced by Assemblyman Hart of Winnebago to double the state income tax. The bill would, it is asserted, raise about $7,000,000 a year for the next two years. Such a sum, or any sum greater than the ordinary taxes now provided by law, is not merely needless but absurd. I am sure that the governor says appropriations will be cut enough to leave margin to provide for any war necessity now apparent. But even if they are not the state tax, automatically increase hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, and if there should be any extraordinary necessity for a larger sum of money, the government would be forced to raise it by the outbreak of the war, which is now before us, the legislature can be called in special session at any time.

That bill is proposed, I understand, on the lines of Amos Pinchot's outcry that "money be conserved in the war." That is a cry to arouse the meanest and most false class prejudices, and if the men who lend their voices to it have any other purpose, they can be accounted for only upon the ground of designedly embarrassing the government or hopeless incompetency. Mr. Hart may not have realized the seriousness of his proposal and I, who do not, know him, am accusing him, but the proposal should be seriously entertained by a sane legislature. Mr. Hart's constituents, who are responsible for him, owe it to themselves to show him his mistake.

A Few Speculations.

Along the lines of this "fire in the rear" policy there are facts that have had very little attention, but are most significant in the light of Herr Zimmerman's beautiful project to invade the United States from Mexico and march up the Mississippi valley. A large majority of the votes in each of the states of the south, and against everything to protect this country, have been cast by the states of this very valley, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, North Dakota and Wisconsin have furnished most of these votes. Two important opportunities for speculation are opened by this situation. First: Did Herr von Bernstorff's statement that such an invasion would cause an uprising in aid of the invading army? And second: What was the American source of such information? With the thoroughness of the German spy system and the intrigue of no one who has followed the course of German methods can doubt that there must have been something quite out of the ordinary upon which they based their elaborate plan of invasion, for Germany could not have expected to provide any large body of men for the invasion of this country. Of course Germany has been noted, as in the case of the expected Irish rebellion, for knowing things that "ain't so," and this scheme is probably just one more instance. But why should our congressmen in the Mississippi valley be voting in harmony with such a program? When you think about it seriously it isn't so funny. It may be just stupid.

Wisconsin's War Record.

When mothers are proud, giving their sons to fight for liberty the trumper toward the "fire in the rear" statesman is getting less and less national. I have looked up some Wisconsin war history in Adjutant General Gaylord's report at the close of the civil war. Wisconsin sent about 92,000 men to the front. This was more than the government asked for and it was, says the report, "more than one in every two voters of the state of 1917." Can you beat it, you boys now being talked about all over the country as "a German province." Isn't true, but our representatives in congress, Madison and Madison are doing all they can to furnish evidence against us.

Gen. Gaylord's report also furnishes some ideas as to the question of conscription. Wisconsin made three drafts to fill its quota and in "he three raised only 11,300 men. On this subject Gen. Gaylord says:

"The experience of the last three and a half years has demonstrated to the state authorities that the enlistment of volunteers in any considerable number can only be effected by the personal influence and exertion of men whose character and standing are well known in their respective localities."

It was a splendid record but our early troops generally went to the front with green uniforms and no experience, but it was filled up

HELPING TO SOLVE THE FOOD PROBLEM

Dr. Beverly T. Galloway.

Dr. Beverly T. Galloway, one of the foremost agricultural experts in the country, has left his post at Cornell University to become an emergency assistant to Secretary of Agriculture Houston. Dr. Galloway, who was formerly chief of the bureau of plant industry at Washington and assistant secretary of agriculture, will devote all of his energies to increasing the production of food in this country.

His resignation takes effect next Tuesday. Lynn Hannah of Kenosha, a graduate of the university, has been mentioned as a possible successor to H. E. Miles of Racine on the state industrial board.

The governor has sent in the resignation of B. N. Moran as state inspector. The confirmation of his appointment will come up in the senate next week. So far, the governor has given out no information regarding his normal school appointment. It is said here that there is opposition to the reappointment of J. D. Beck on the industrial commission. Many manufacturers of the state are in opposition to the reappointment of Mr. Beck. There is opposition, however, in some quarters. The governor is now searching for a member of the railroad commission to take the place of Walter Alexander.

ROCK COUNTY DEFENSE COUNCIL ORGANIZED

such rules for its officers, its business and its meetings, and appoint such committees from its own body or from the citizenship of the county or precinct as it may think necessary.

(7) That the County Committee shall represent the citizens of the county, in the fullest possible cooperation with the State Council of Defense and with other organizations of a similar character.

(8) That the Auxiliary Committee of a precinct shall be the principal agency for the raising of funds for the Council, and all moneys collected by it shall be paid to the Treasurer of the Council.

(9) That the Treasurer, upon the certification of the President and Secretary, shall pay the reasonable disbursements for administration of the County and of all Auxiliary Committees.

(10) That quarterly reports shall be made by the Auxiliary Committees to the County Committee.

(11) That quarterly reports shall be made by the County Committee to the State Council and to the County Board.

Smith Takes Chair.
Following the adoption of the resolution, Hon. Simon Smith of Beloit took the chair as president of the county defense committee.

Mr. Smith said that he was as young as I was when I attended a war meeting in '61," said Mr. Smith in expressing his thanks to the convention for the honor conferred.

I shall do my best to fill this position acceptably with all the responsibility that it demands. Rock county has never failed the state or the nation yet, and she will not fail them now.

W. H. Dougherty was called for on the matter of resolutions. He made a short address in which he declared that in his estimation it would be a futile and useless thing to pass resolutions which would do nothing.

The time for talk and for words is through," said Mr. Dougherty. "and we are now facing the hour for service. There are many functions which this organization may assume, but one of the most important of these is keeping right public opinion.

The government will be aided by politicians, and persons with ulterior motives will raise up their voices. It is time for the citizens of this country to take a stand for loyalty and for service. There is one statement which you all have heard and which is nothing more than a sedition and the persons expressing it are undesirable citizens. It is that this is the war of capitalists, a war of street.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Our president in his message to congress has set up for us a high ideal. He has made a statement of principles which is calculated to thrill every true American heart.

He has placed this nation on a very high plane, and this war is to be waged in defense of the principles of liberty, truth and justice, that gave us birth as a nation.

"Every man here, every true American, wants to be of service. I am anxious to do my bit and if necessary I am willing to answer the call of colors. I then if there is anything that I can do in preparing for the conflict along economic lines which are so vital to the success of the war, I am ready to do all within my power. We are all here to pledge our services to our beloved country."

Provision for Funds.
J. J. Cunningham moved that the county board be petitioned for an appropriation of $3,000 to defray the expenses which it may be necessary for the defense committee to incur. This was unanimously adopted and the matter will come before the board at their May meeting.

Mr. S. Dudgeon of Madison gave an address to the council after A. B. Matheson read the president's war message. He commended the county call for perfecting such an organization and pointed out that there would be hard work ahead.

"The great purpose before us all is to win this war and to win it quickly," said Mr. Dudgeon. "I say this with all kindness to the people with whom we fight, for the sooner the war is ended the less will be suffering and the hardship to them as well as to ourselves."

"In order to bring peace soon, it will be necessary for every man, woman and child of these United States to do his bit, and whatever we can do, in God's name, let every last man of us get together and do it."

"We need to realize the character of this war. It is not in a selfish cause; it does not contemplate any material gain to us as a nation. It is a war for humanity, a war for the rights of democracy. It is in line with the purposes of those patriots of former days in our republic, of George Washington, of Lincoln and of McKinley. I would also say that it is a Christian war because it is a war for humanity in its highest sense."

"What is war? War is a mobilization of a nation's resources to be pitted against the resources of the enemy. The success of any country at war is based upon its food supply as well as its financial strength, its trained men in arms and its bullets. Not only do we need armies to fight, but we also need the full resources of the country effectively organized behind those armies in order to insure victory."

Food Supply Important.
Mr. Dudgeon pointed out that the problem of food supply for 150,000,000 persons in Russia, 100,000,000 in England, 100,000,000 in France and 6,000,000 in Italy, was virtually connected with the function of the United States in this war. He declared that it may become more important to raise food for these millions than to send men to the front.

Mr. Dudgeon went into the matter of organizing this nation's resources for the war. He reviewed the national defense council and its activities, the call for perfecting such an organization and pointed out that there would be hard work ahead.

is a somewhat intangible function which this defense council and the state council can perform. It has almost a spiritual meaning. They can keep the fires of patriotism burning in this county and in this state. They can keep steadily before the people the need for economy, for husbanding the resources and to keep the citizens psychologically, mentally and physically in a state of preparedness for whatever may come.

Starvation an Actual Menace.
Prof. L. K. Hatch of the state college of agriculture gave an address in which he emphasized the need for increase of food production in this country. Wars of the present day are won not by men, nor by money, nor by munitions, but by food supplies, he said.

So serious is the question of food production, he declared, that if the food supply continues to decrease and prices to increase, in three years time there will be many persons in every American community who will starve to death.

He called attention to the fact that there are 50,000,000 men in Europe who are non-producers, either in the armies or wounded or disabled, or prisoners. With these men withdrawn from the field of production there rests a giant responsibility on this country to speed up production.

To prove that conditions in the United States were alarming with regard to food supply, Prof. Hatch cited government figures on the production of staple grains showing marked decreases last year, barely sufficient to feed our own people. In addition there is the prospect of a winter wheat crop of 52,000,000 short.

It was plain, he said, where our duty lay.

"I would impress upon the farmers of this state two things," said Prof. Hatch. "In the first place you are going to be amply rewarded for whatever you do. Prices will be high, they cannot be lower, even if prices should come within a year. In the second place I would appeal to you to produce bumper crops, not because prices are high, but because of your altruism, your love for your fellow man. Produce enough food so that the laborer in the cities can keep his family from starving. Do your bit along the line of food production and you will be of as great service to the country as the man who carries a gun and fights in the trenches."

CONCERT PRESENTED BY SUNDAY SCHOOL

Program of Unusual Merit Enriched by Large Audience at M. E. Church

Friday Evening

An especially fine program of literary and musical numbers was given under the auspices of the Sunday school at the Methodist church on Friday evening. Each number was the best of its kind, and nearly all were obliged to respond to encores. The Glee club, which opened the program with two selections, was composed of about twenty girls of high school age who had been drilled in the work by Miss Sewell, and they sang remarkably well.

The Flowers and Chorus was given by about fifty little tots dressed in crepe paper to represent the flowers and vegetables, about which they sang. They looked remarkably enjoying and sang their part with evident enjoyment. The selections given by E. Van Eol, "Not Because Your Heart is Mine" and "Absent" were rendered with taste and feeling and the violin duet played by Holo Dobson and Miss Ruth Soultman was particularly harmonious and pleasing.

A patriotic reading, "His Country and the Flag for Which It Stands," was a true story of a woman's experience given by Miss Nott at the piano and Mrs. Richards at the organ.

The "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn, was given very acceptably by a quartette, Miss Sewell, Mrs. S. Clark, Miss Briggs and Mrs. Welch, and Dr. S. Richards sang "The Foreword" among them being "The Foreword" program closed with a musical selection given by Miss Nott at the piano and Mrs. Richards at the organ.

The well known articles shown above, may very appropriately be spoken of as adjuncts or aids to house keeping. It would not be amiss even, to speak of the chiffonier as an annex to the dresser, and of the cedar chest and utility boxes as cousins to the chiffonier.

When the closets and dressers are full to overflowing as is the case in many a home, these adjuncts, aids and annexes come to the rescue, and save the housewife much trouble and annoyance. We have them here in good variety, pleasing styles, and at attractive prices.

Home of Character No 268 - John Henry Newson, Architect

Clip This Page
For Future
Reference

This Stately Home is of the Modern English Type

The walls are hollow tile, faced with rough cut brick of the tapestry type. Overhangs and panels are stucco on metal lath. Exterior wood work is stained with wood preserving compound, and windows are metal casements with glass set in metallic leading. Roof is slate, but tile would be equally attractive. These are all fire-resisting materials, which both increase the life of the house as well as reduce the cost of maintenance and insurance. The size is 47x35 feet over all. A detailed description will be furnished on request. Can be built as described for from $6000 to $7000. If built on a narrow lot porch could be placed at rear of living room with sleeping porch over, opening off of upper hall.

PLAN YOUR HOME NOW! Make use of the fund of information that Mr. Newson holds at your disposal. Ask him about these "Homes of Character." Always give the number of home and address "John Henry Newson, Homes of Character Dept., The Gazette." No charge for Mr. Newson's answers.

HOT WATER When and Where You Want It!

We all know that laundrying, cleaning and bathing is dependent upon a plentiful supply of hot water, and that the ease with which these various functions are performed depends to a greater degree on the efficiency of your hot water system.

Connect a Lion Double Coil Circulating Heater to your range or furnace boiler. The simple lighting of a match—the turn of a valve, and in a few minutes you have plenty of hot water available at any hot water faucet in the house.

TECTONIUS SILOS

The Best Silo at the Price of the Cheapest.

There is no question about a Silo being the best thing to help make the farm pay. You will bring up the question, naturally, as to what Silo is the best. Of course, you want the best Silo.

The TECTONIUS is a wood silo and everyone knows that wood makes the best silage. In addition to the advantage of being made of wood, it is wind and storm proof.

The TECTONIUS is positively as tight and as strong as a concrete, brick or tile silo. We make this statement unreservedly because it applies at all times, in all seasons, and in all weathers. Sounds incredible but it's true just the same.

TECTONIUS' original, exclusive, Self-Adjusting Silo Door and Hoop Fasteners make all this possible.

If you are interested in a Silo just step into our office soon and let us tell you all about it, or if you are busy just send us a postal card and we'll send you a lot of interesting facts about the TECTONIUS silo. SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY PRICE, $135 for a 10x24 silo. (Price subject to change without notice).
